Paid time off for MLK Day not automatic

Chicago Tribune

Martin Luther King Jr. Day is observed with a day off for government employees, but many other employers don't necessarily follow suit.

According to a recent survey from the Bloomberg Bureau of National Affairs, about three in 10 non-federal employers will give all or most workers Monday off with pay for Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

It's just a slight gain from the 30 percent in 2011, but significantly higher than in the first years after the holiday was created. Only 14 percent of surveyed businesses made MLK Day a paid day off in 1987. That figure reached 30 percent in 2004 and has hovered around there since.

By contrast, about 96 percent of employers surveyed gave Thanksgiving Day as a paid holiday for workers in 2011.

President Reagan signed legislation to make Martin Luther King Jr. Day a federal holiday in 1983, and it was first observed in 1986.

Matt Sottong, BNA director of surveys and research, said the controversy surrounding the holiday in its early years has waned.

"There's a link between collective perception and the perception of businesses to recognize the legitimacy of a given holiday," Sottong said. "We've moved beyond the question of why or if [King] deserves that status."

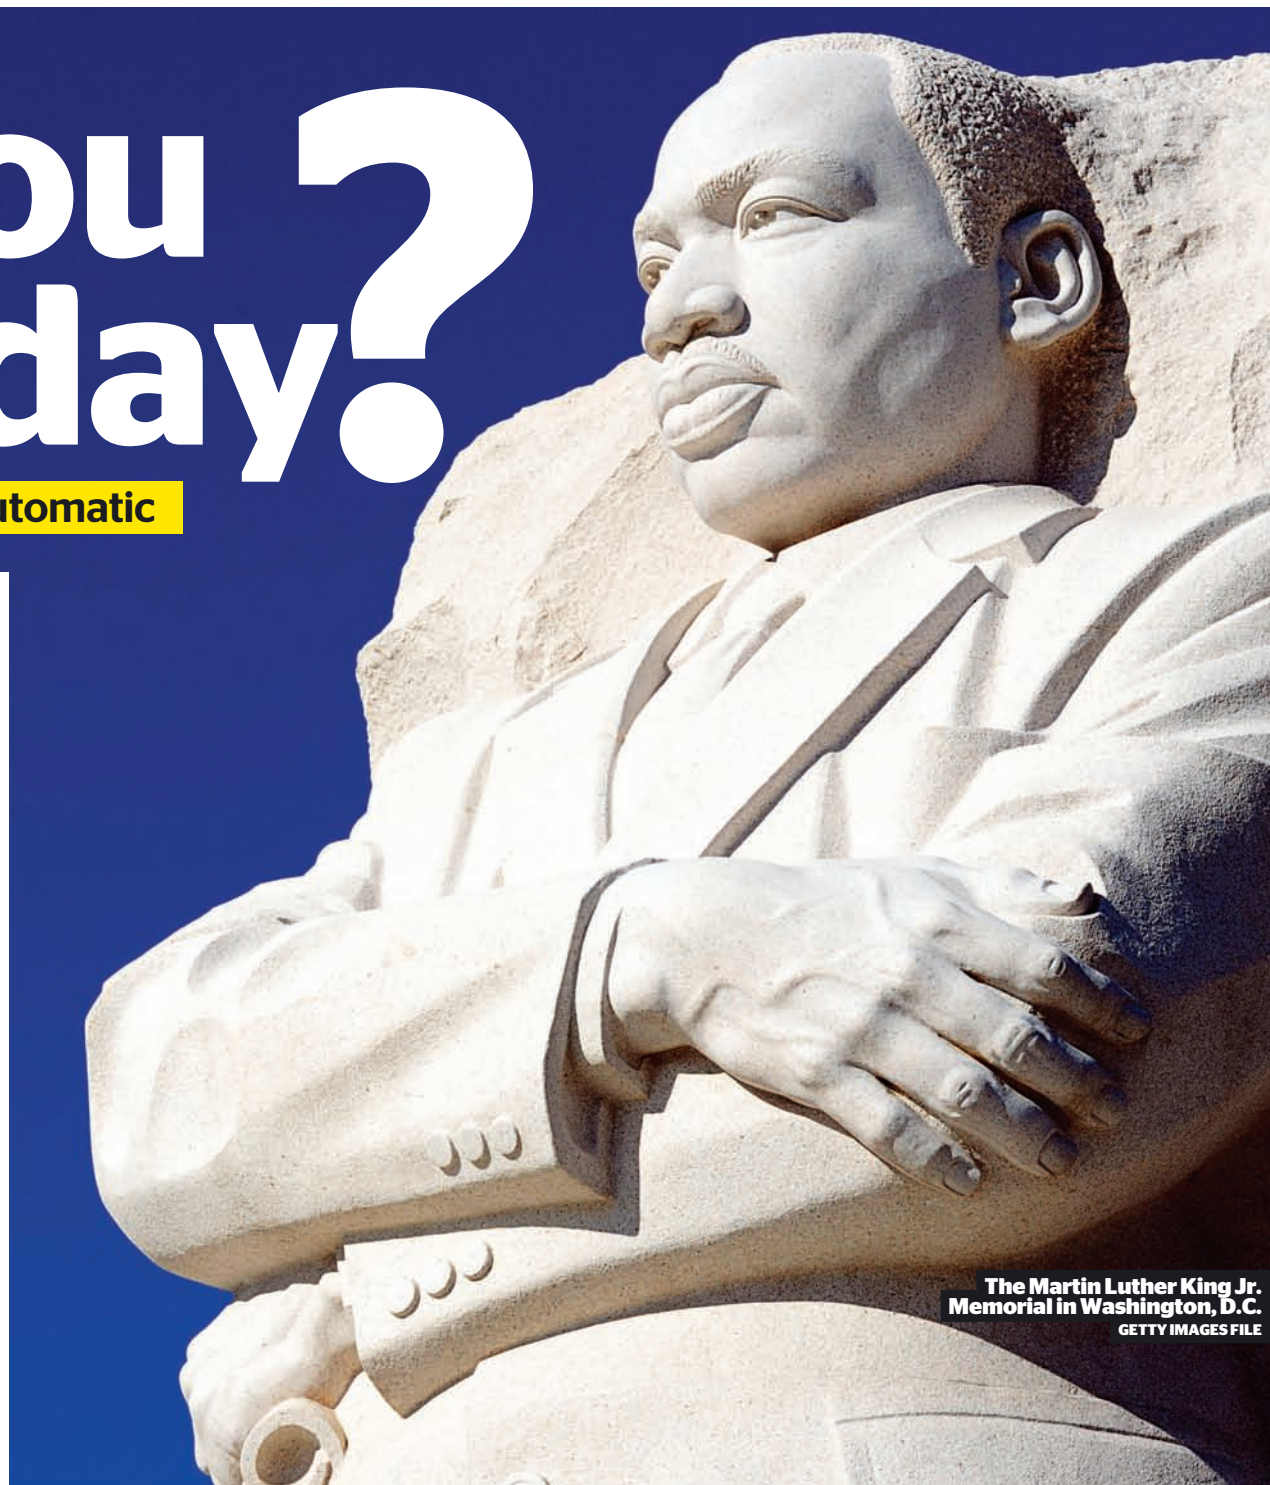

Larry Huggins, owner of Riteway-Huggins Construction Services in Marynook, said he grew up in King's hometown of Atlanta when the civil rights leader came to prominence. That experience is one reason why he has given his employees MLK Day off since it first became a recognized holiday.

"It's a personal decision because of what he meant, not only to me as an African-American, but what he meant to this nation," Huggins said. "I think that as African-Americans, we should honor our own."

Despite the slight gains, Clayborne Carson of The Martin Luther King, Jr. Research and Education Institute at Stanford University said more workers expect the holiday to be observed and that employers should accommodate that sentiment.

"It's the one holiday we have that reflects America's best ideals of justice, equality, democracy and human rights," Carson said. "It's part of our national heritage now."

Gays and Catholics: It's about leadership

Waymon Hudson
» redeye@tribune.com

Ten years ago, when a "commitment ceremony" was all that was available to same-sex couples, my husband-to-be and I invited all of our relatives.

In front of more than 200 members of our extended families and friends, we stated our vows and declared our commitment to one another.

The people who attended included both sets of parents, aunts, uncles and people we never imagined would be OK with two men marrying. Yet they shed tears, hugged us and sincerely congratulated us on our love.

Even my husband's devout Catholic family told us that day: "Family comes first."

There was one glaring exception, however: my husband's aunt. When she heard we were marrying, she sent a greeting card to his parents that read: "Sorry for your loss." It was a condolence card meant for funerals.

That was a jarring gesture on what should have been a happy occasion. We tried to consider the source—an isolated, mean-spirited woman—but her words hung over the day like an unspoken cloud.

I've been reminded of that experience—the embrace from my big, new Catholic family, and the disappointment that came from the words of one person—by two recent anti-gay statements that have made headlines.

In December, Cardinal Francis George compared the Chicago Pride Parade, whose rescheduled route through Boystown was to pass in front of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church during Sunday Mass, to Ku Klux Klan marches against Catholicism. That was after parade organizers moved the event back to its normal time to accommodate the church. He later apologized under a barrage of outrage and threatened protests.

Then last week, Pope Benedict said during his new year address that gay marriage endangers "the future of humanity itself."

Like my experience with my husband's aunt, I'm disappointed by the statements by such prominent members of the Catholic Church's leadership, but I also recognize that they are not reflective of the progressive American flock, particularly in Boystown.

According to a 2011 study by the nonprofit, nonpartisan Public Religion Research Institute, American Catholics are more supportive of same-sex relationships than any other Christian tradition and Americans overall. Nearly three-quarters of Catholics support either same-sex marriage or civil unions, like we have in Illinois.

That's great news for those of us who live in Boystown, where many churches welcome the LGBT community by posting rainbow stickers or hanging rainbow flags.

When the religious leaders spout such incendiary rhetoric, we in the LGBT community, as always, consider the source—in this case, men who, according to this recent study and my own personal experiences, appear to be out of touch with their flock.

Yet in June, when we march down Belmont Avenue and past Our Lady of Mount Carmel during the Pride parade, many of us will hear echoes of Cardinal George's and Pope Benedict's statements during what should be a day to celebrate who we are and whom we love.

Or perhaps we'll feel a sense of success—that shining a light on these hurtful statements is an opportunity to create change. After all, Cardinal George was forced to apologize for his comments about the Chicago Pride Parade not just by the LGBT community, but from our friends, neighbors and families as well.

"I have family members myself who are gay and lesbian, so it's part of our lives," he told the Chicago Tribune in his apology. "So I'm sorry for the hurt."

We saw the power of a community coming together to challenge and correct out-of-touch leadership—and that should give us something to have pride about.

New marching orders?

City plans to issue permit to bring back South Side Irish Parade

Chicago Tribune

City officials have agreed to issue a permit for the South Side Irish Parade to be held again this March, despite concerns about security connected to the St. Patrick's Day event that organizers shut down in 2009 after widespread drunken fighting and assaults on Chicago police officers.

The South Side Irish Parade Committee hopes to return the Beverly event to its family-oriented roots while continuing to draw the massive crowds that, after the parade was launched in 1979, became a bonanza for local taverns and other Southwest Side businesses.

Organizers of the March 11 event are considering setting up checkpoints manned by private security guards, making the parade route along Western Avenue shorter and cracking down more forcefully on outdoor drinking in an effort to quell unruly behavior in nearby parks and residential streets, parade committee chairman Joseph Connelly said Saturday.

The group also hopes to control the presence of chartered buses, which in the parade's final years became rolling booze fests for revelers from bars on the North Side and college campuses throughout the Chicago region. At the least, Connelly said, those buses would be corralled in designated parking lots.

"If we're allowed, we could have a couple bus drop-off points with a police presence, where they will be searched coming off the buses," Connelly said.

"If someone's coming off a bus intoxicated, they could detain them or not allow them to go on to the parade."

"We certainly don't want them dumping their problems on our neighborhood," he said.

Ald. Matt O'Shea, whose 19th ward includes the parade route, raised strong objections to a new parade permit, saying he isn't convinced the committee has done enough to stop the problems that derailed the parade a few years back.

In a letter to Mayor Emanuel, the alderman said he finds the group's safety plan "sorely lacking."

Paterno was unsure in handling sex abuse tip

Joe Paterno, the longtime Penn State football coach fired in the fallout from child sex abuse allegations against former assistant Jerry Sandusky, says he was unsure how to handle the first report about Sandusky that reached him in 2002.

"I didn't know exactly how to handle it, and I was afraid to do something that might jeopardize what the university procedure was," Paterno told The Washington Post in his first extensive public comments since being dismissed by the university in November. "So I backed away and turned it over to some other people, people I thought would have a little more expertise than I did. It didn't work out that way."

Texas Gov. Rick Perry, scrambling to keep his presidential bid alive, accused the Obama administration on Sunday of overreacting to a video that shows four Marines appearing to urinate on dead Taliban fighters in Afghanistan. "They shouldn't have done it. It's bad," Perry said on CNN's "State of the Union." "But to call it a criminal act, I think, is over the top."

Nightmare at sea

4 The confirmed death toll from the capsizing of Carnival Corp.'s Costa Concordia off Italy's Tuscan coast rose to five Sunday as rescuers continued to search for 15 people still missing. Three people were found alive in the capsized cruise liner.

The ship's captain has been arrested and accused of manslaughter, abandoning the vessel and causing the shipwreck following the incident on Friday. Two bodies were found aboard the ship Sunday, said Stefano Giannelli, a fire department spokesman, adding to two French tourists and a Peruvian crew member who are also known to have died.

About 60 people also were injured after the ship carrying more than 4,000 passengers and crew hit submerged rocks near the island of Giglio in the Tyrrhenian Sea.

Rescue workers evacuated passengers and crew to the nearest mainland port, Santo Stefano, Italy's Civil Protection Agency said on its website. Rescuers found two South Korean passengers in a cabin inside the ship at 3 a.m. local time Sunday and they saved a crew member after voices were heard on the third deck, Giannelli, said.

Captain Francesco Schettino is being detained for allegedly abandoning the ship, said Francesco Verusio, chief prosecutor in the city of Grosseto.

Gianni Onorato, general manager of the Costa Crociere line, said the ship had embarked about 7 p.m. from Civitavecchia near Rome on a trip that was scheduled to include stops at ports in France and Spain. The vessel hit the rocks and Captain Schettino, after assessing the damage, decided to secure the ship and gave the evacuation order, Onorato told news channel SkyTG24 in an interview. A Costa Crociere spokesman confirmed the comments.

The number of missing may be as low as 15, Tuscany Region Governor Enrico Rossi said. The U.S. Embassy in Italy said two of the 120 U.S. passengers still are unaccounted for, according to a statement posted on Twitter on Sunday.

PASSENGERS: FELT LIKE 'TITANIC'

The cruise ship Costa Concordia hit the rocks about 9:45 p.m. Friday as dinner was being served, sending plates and glasses crashing, Italian media reported. Passengers said the situation on board was reminiscent of the film "Titanic," as the vessel tilted, electrical power was lost and people rushed to find lifeboats.

"This is a terrible tragedy and we are deeply saddened," Carnival said Saturday in a statement. Carnival, based in Miami, is the world's largest cruise line owner.

Costa Crociere said "it seems" that the captain took the ship on a route that was too close to the island of Giglio and didn't follow company emergency procedures, making "very serious judgment mistakes," according to an emailed statement Sunday.

The N.Y. Giants' Corey Webster (top) and Michael Boley tackle Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers during the teams' playoff game Sunday at Lambeau Field. US PRESSWIRE

Unpacked house

Green Bay is out, so who's gonna be the new Super Bowl champ?

By Whizzer

REDEYE

I know this comes as a crushing blow to Bears fans everywhere, but the Green Bay Packers will not be defending their Super Bowl title this year. We have the N.Y. Giants to thank for that. Give those guys a treat.

On Sunday, the Giants exposed the Packers' Swiss cheese defense, cruising to a 37-20 win at Lambeau Field. They did it through the air, on the ground and inside the heads of the Packers.

Earlier Sunday, Baltimore ousted the surprising Houston Texans, setting up an NFL final four of the Giants, Ravens, San Francisco 49ers and New England Patriots.

As an expert in the gambling arts, I'd like to handicap the teams left standing.

New England Patriots

Will they suffer the wrath of the gods after treating Tim Tebow and the Denver Broncos to a good old-fashioned butt-whooping Saturday? Considering Patriots quarterback Tom Brady is somewhat of a god himself, New England should be just fine. The team's weakness, pass defense, didn't look too weak. Of course, Tebow's arm is about as weak as they come in the NFL.

SUPER BOWL CHANCES: As close to a lock as possible

San Francisco 49ers

Time to pay attention to Jim Harbaugh's 49ers. Yes, they snuck up on just about everybody it seems, but San Fran is the real deal. Quarterback Alex Smith has delivered when it matters, but they'll be facing perhaps the hottest team still in the fight in the N.Y. Giants. That's nothing a little home cookin' won't fix though.

SUPER BOWL CHANCES: Very high

N.Y. Giants

Has Eli Manning turned into the best quarterback in the Manning family? Sure, right now. Peyton's not even playing. But all kidding aside, the dude's on fire. And he's got four receivers that could start for the Bears right now. The Giant defense deserves some props as well, making Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rodgers look absolutely average.

SUPER BOWL CHANCES: Good

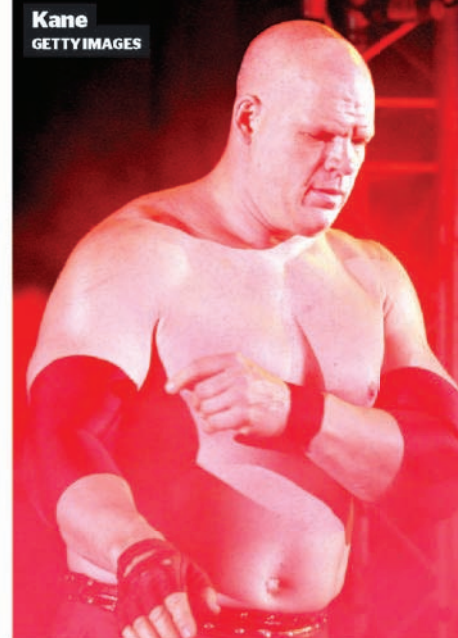

Baltimore Ravens

They say defense wins championships. Who's they? Who cares. They're smart. The Ravens looked absolutely frightening defensively against Houston, and that D will be put to the test with Brady opposing them. Fortunately for the Ravens, the sometimes anemic offense led by QB Joe Flacco won't face such a test in the Patriots D. As long as Baltimore remembers they have one of the league's best runners in Ray Rice, they could pull off an upset.

SUPER BOWL CHANCES: OK

ATTEND DePaul vs. Georgetown

6 p.m. Tuesday, Allstate Arena

Don't call it a comeback. The Blue

Demons are not the punching bag they used to be, but they'll have their hands full against Georgetown.

ATTEND Blackhawks vs. Florida

7:30 p.m. Friday, United Center

No, you're not seeing things. Kris Versteeg, John Madden, Jack Skille, Tomas Kopecky and Brian Campbell really are back at the United Center—as members of the Panthers. Remember, the airport's thattaway, guys.

ATTEND Steel vs. Indiana

7:30 p.m. Friday, Edge Ice Arena, Bensenville

Yes, another hockey team in the Chicago area. At the price ($6 advance/$8 at the door), it's not a bad way to spend a Friday. That is, if you can make your way to Bensenville.

SKATE Rink at Wrigley

10 a.m.-11 p.m. Saturday, 1100 W. Addison St.

Now that winter has actually arrived, why not test your ice-skating skills at the rink in the parking lot next to Wrigley Field? It ends Feb. 26, and that will arrive sooner than you think.

1 How could the Bulls defense get even better?

By drafting the entire FSU hoops squad, apparently. 33 POINTS. NEVER FORGET.

If the Luvabulls were allowed to put land mines around the opponent's basket during timeouts.

Teach Boozer how to play it.

Put 5 inches of snow in front of opponents. Seems no one can "drive" when that happens.

Only If they had a sixth man on the floor.

2 The Blackhawks' division is so tough this year ...

... you could argue that whoever wins it runs rampant through the playoffs.

... even the beer vendors wear pads. Ever try getting a beer in Joe Louis Arena? Brutal.

... Coach Q's mustache tightens up just thinking about it.

... call it the Norris Division again—the Chuck Norris Division.

... Chris Chelios is thinking about coming back for ONE MORE YEAR!

3 Jim Harbaugh getting upset at his QB for calling an audible is like ...

... your boy/girlfriend making you breakfast and you complaining that the toast isn't crunchy. Shut up and enjoy.

... Madonna getting annoyed at Lady Gaga for "Born This Way." "Respect Yourself," anyone?

... Jim Schwartz getting upset about slap-grab handshakes. They just happen, man.

... John Harbaugh getting upset at his bad QB. Yet, we're still one step closer to a Super Harbaugh Bowl.

... telling LeBron James, "Uhhh, hold off on taking that shot and consult me first."

4 What do you think of the Budweiser Patio the Cubs announced Saturday?

Seems like a great way to distract from another year of shoddy baseball. Go, Cubs, go.

Oh great, yet another bar in Wrigleyville I won't be allowed to enter.

If Theo brings us wins, I can handle a few barely disguised excuses for Bud ads.

I thought ALL of Wrigley Field was a Budweiser patio.

Makes you wonder: How much more can they desecrate Wrigley Field?

5 What was the best part of the Cubs Convention?

Not having to go. Happy MLK Day, everyone. Go make the world suck less.

Vance Law. You've gotta love any Cub whose name sounds like a superhero.

Bill Buckner's mustache.

Cubs giving everyone Wood with their surprise announcement.

Wait, wasn't that a convention for a AAA team? Ahhh, rebuilding, like haven't we heard that before?

Team Chairman Tom Ricketts speaks at the Cubs Convention on Friday. CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

The Cubs report

Wood is back, but the team plays McDonald's lot plans close to the vest

RedEye

The annual Cubs Convention began with a bang this weekend and ended with a surprise. Fans can only hope the actual baseball season is as successful.

Let's review, shall we?

FRIDAY

During the convention's opening ceremonies, fans found out during player introductions that beloved pitcher Kerry Wood would be back this season. Wood and the Cubs agreed to a one-year, $3 million contract before the start of the convention, but it wasn't announced until the pitcher was introduced last. The best part? "We got Wood" jokes for at least another year.

SATURDAY

The Ricketts family had its annual question-and-answer session, which resulted in a lot of mundane discussion. One interesting nugget, however, was the still-mysterious plans for the McDonald's property the family recently bought. "For the season, I think what you can expect is something pretty cool on the south end of that lot, and the McDonald's will stay ..."

Also, the team unveiled plans for the Budweiser Patio above the right-field bleachers. The area is designed for group outings and will feature an LED board beneath it to display player info and whatnot. Probably advertising too.

SUNDAY

The convention closed with the "Father-Son Connection," featuring Shawon Dunston and son, Shawon Dunston Jr., Bob Brenly and son Michael, and Keith Lockhart and son Daniel. Awwwww.

Odom: I almost sat out the season

L.A. Laker-turned-Dallas Maverick Lamar Odom isn't having a great year on the court, but at least he's playing. Odom told espn.com he almost sat out the season after a death in the family and being involved in an accident that killed a teenager. His wife, Khloe Kardashian, talked him out of it, though. Of course she did.

Vonn returns to winning ways

American skier Lindsey Vonn made headlines Sunday for something other than her personal life: The 27-year-old won the women's super-G in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, for her first victory in more than a month. She now has 47 career World Cup victories.

BEST DRESSED

ANGELINA JOLIE

Though she's a little skinny for our taste, Jolie looks fierce in this white dress with just enough pop of color from her neckline to remind us why she's the queen of the red carpet.

NATALIE PORTMAN

Let's just get this out of the way: She gave birth last year. So it's totally unfair for her to be looking so stunning. She doesn't have a movie in the works, so obviously she wants us to remember what a babe she is.

SOFIA VERGARA

Hitting it out of the park on the red carpet, Vergara's feathery, swooping gown stopped everyone from wondering what the heck she was actually talking about during her interview on E!

EMMA STONE

We're beginning to expect great things from this starlet. The sweeping fabric and sophisticated color palette are hot, and the accessories add the perfect amount of badass.

CHARLIZE THERON

Theron always looks like she walked out of a magazine, so this is a cakewalk for her. But her muted color palette and deep cleavage somehow manage to outdo even her high standards.

WORST DRESSED

MELISSA MCCARTHY

We love our hometown girl, but this shapeless number was doing her no favors. Also, she needs to leave the hair bumpits to Snooki.

SARAH MICHELLE GELLAR

It's been awhile since Gellar has been on the red carpet, so we guess she wanted to make a splash by splattering paint everywhere—which ended up on her dress.

ZOOEY DESCHANEL

There's a fine line between beading and scales. And Zooey has crossed that line. This looks like a dress her character Jess from "The New Girl" would pick out.

MICHELLE WILLIAMS

She gave a great acceptance speech, but that didn't stop us from WTF-ing at her crushed velvet-inspired dress. Leave that fabric for the curtains next time, Michelle.

Gervais plays it safe

SHOW PATROL*Curt Wagner

» cwwagner@tribune.com
» @showpatrol

"So where was I? Nervous? Don't be. This isn't about you."

With that, Ricky Gervais was off and running Sunday as host/roastmaster of the 69th annual Golden Globe Awards, putting Hollywood's A-listers on notice but also referencing the hype he's gotten for hosting the ceremony.

"Tonight you get the world's biggest comedian, hosting the world's second-biggest awards show on America's third-biggest network," he said in his opening monologue during the ceremony that aired on NBC. "Sorry, it's fourth. Fourth."

He slammed Mel Gibson (again), took clever jabs at Jodie Foster and Eddie Murphy and struck his bosses and Kim Kardashian in a single swing. "The Golden Globes are to the Oscars what Kim Kardashian is to Kate Middleton," he said. "A bit louder, bit trashier, bit drunker. And more easily bought. Allegedly."

This was Gervais' third time hosting, and he seemed to be playing it safe despite promising he'd take it a notch higher than last year, when he made headlines by skewering Hollywood's elite. Many were surprised when the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, the group that awards the Globes, asked him back this year.

The Kardashian joke was low-hanging fruit—but he collected it well.

Whether causing groans, eye rolls or laughter, Gervais still entertained as host because you just never know what he's going to do.

He slyly revisited a jab he took last year at nominated but critically reviled "The Tourist" when he introduced its star, Johnny Depp. "Have you seen 'The Tourist' yet?" he asked. Depp paused dramatically, then said, "No."

Gervais also managed to piss off at least one of the presenters he introduced, Madonna. He suggested she might still be "Like a Virgin," which caused the Material Girl to fire back. "If I'm still just like a virgin, Ricky, then why don't you come over here and do something about it," she said. "I haven't kissed a girl in a few years."

Gervais ran across the back of the stage as she was talking, a funny bit of physical comedy.

With uncomfortably funny moments like that, it was a little disappointing when Gervais wasted time attacking easy targets with jokes that weren't too original. (Of Justin Bieber he said, "The only way that he could have impregnated a girl is if he borrowed one of Martha Stewart's turkey basters.")

His constant self-referencing got a little annoying too; no one wants to hear about the size of your penis unless the reveal is part of a funny joke, Ricky.

Take presenter Seth Rogen's self-introduction (and the best line of the night), for example. When Rogen presented an award with the gorgeous Kate Beckinsale, he couldn't help himself: "I'm Seth Rogen, and I'm currently trying to conceal a massive erection."

I'm not saying it's time for Gervais to step aside. But if he does, Rogen might be a great replacement.

 tuesday

JENNIFER HUDSON
Tuesday, January 17th, at 7PM, at Barnes & Noble, 55 Old Orchard Center, Skokie (847) 676-2230.
Please call the store for complete event details.

JODI KANTOR AT CPL
New York Times correspondent Jodi Kantor discusses and signs her new book, The Obamas at the Chicago Public Library, while WBEZ's Steve Edwards joins Ms. Kantor in the conversation. The free program takes place Tuesday, January 17 at 6:00 p.m., in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium (Lower Level) at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. Ms. Kantor takes us deep inside the White House as the Obamas grapple with their new roles, change the country, raise children, maintain friendships, and figure out what it means to be the first black President and First Lady. Filled with detail and insight into their partnership, emotions and personalities, The Obamas is an intimate portrait that will surprise even readers who thought they knew the President and First Lady. For more information, visit the Library's website at www.chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call the Chicago Public Library at (312) 747-4050. Photo credit: Juliana Sohn.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

appreciate your willpower.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
Jupiter is filling you with grand plans. You've made a resolution to lose weight. Your partner will in thick clothing just to stay warm. The sun is telling you to find warmth with someone.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
This time of year always annoys you. You hate the lack of sunlight, you detest the cold and you hate burying that hot body but it will be a nice release of a lot of pent up emotion. Recount your adventures to your significant other.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
A sassy moon could inspire you to tell someone exactly what you think about him or her. This is likely to prove disastrous, likely that you'll continue your modest little life. You're still sexy, though.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Neptune is filling your head with daydreams. Sure, you'd love to be a supermodel or a football player, but it's more thrilled you for weeks before going off to jail?

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
The moon has you thinking about contacting someone from your little black book. Remember that guy who stage, and you need to be cautious. Venus advises you against acting mean or pushy with your sweetheart.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Sometimes relationships require a gentle touch. You might not realize it, but a romance is reaching a critical smell; it's how you're behaving.

Aries March 21-April 19
With the moon opposite your sign, you're wondering if you've developed horrible body odor. People are avoiding you. It's not your

Taurus April 20-May 20
A relationship that was on hold might suddenly show promise. Jupiter says things are looking up.

Gemini May 21-June 21
Sometimes it's dumb to tell the truth. The moon is urging you not to be honest with your lover.

Cancer June 22-July 22
With Mercury opposite your sign, you're feeling antisocial. You want to stay home. This isn't particularly attractive.

Who's thirsty? Kerry Wood gets behind the bar at his charity fundraiser

The tips collected at Kerry Wood's charity event at Harry Caray's Tavern at Navy Pier on Friday went straight to the Wood Family Foundation, which might explain why the Cubs and Bears players working the Woody's Winter Warm-up benefit seemed determined to earn gratuities by any means necessary.

Cubs pitcher Randy Wells served drinks behind the bar and at one point allowed a 50-something woman to place a $5 bill down the front of his collar. Former Bear Otis Wilson also got behind the bar, but he seemed to earn his biggest tips when he allowed guests to try on his 1985 Super Bowl ring.

Theo Epstein, the Cubs' president of baseball operations, didn't pour any drinks, but he seemed to pose for as many photos with guests as anyone else. He also showed off his guitar skills when he joined the Plain White T's onstage to perform Neil Young's "Rockin' in the Free World." Wells opted to play Tom Petty's "Free Fallin'" with the Plain White T's.

Also in attendance were former The Academy Is... frontman William Beckett, who performed earlier in the night; the Cubs' Ryan Dempster, who hosted his own charity event for his Dempster Family Foundation on Thursday at D'Agostino's in Wrigleyville; and the Bears' Israel Idonije, who poured wine for guests.

The star of the evening, of course, was Wood.

When Wood was behind the bar serving drinks, one fan used the opportunity to congratulate the pitcher on his new contract, announced that day at the Cubs Convention.

"Thank you, thank you," Wood said before looking into the crowd and yelling, "Anybody need a drink?"

DIRTY POLITICS

Only days after announcing he is running for "president of the United States of South Carolina," Stephen Colbert is on the offensive against his political rivals. An ad paid for by the super-PAC Colbert turned over to Comedy Central partner Jon Stewart accuses Mitt Romney of being a "serial killer" of corporations.

It's always sad when they go negative.

Oooo ... awk-ward!

The good news for "Video Games" singer Lana Del Rey (above): She didn't pull an Ashlee Simpson in her first performance on "Saturday Night Live." The bad news: Her nervous performance of the song that turned her into an instant indie sensation led some to wonder if she's ready for prime time. GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

March 'Mad'-ness

Mark your calendars, people: "Mad Men" has a premiere date. AMC confirmed what Jon Hamm previously leaked—that Season 5 begins March 25. But the network did drop a juicy bit of news as well, saying the show will be a two-hour blowout!

Back in business

Looks like Nick Cannon is feeling better. He made his first public appearance since his "mild kidney failure" scare, taking the stage Saturday at the BET Honors in Washington to present an award to his wife, Mariah Carey, whom he credited with helping nurse him back to health, according to usmagazine.com.

“I hid out in my basement with my band, so I didn't see the light a lot.”
